

FINE STORY AT
THE ELLANAYTells a Tale of Love in the Great Northwestern
Out of Doors.

"Back to God's Country," the picture at the Ellanay, which made its initial showing Christmas eve, is most attractive. The distinguishing feature is its wonderful scenic effects and the animal life in the picture. Squirrels, bears, deer and dogs form an interesting part of the story. The whole story is told out of doors. Most of the settings are in Alaska. The vast plains of white snow blended into the cold gray sky made an effect most artistic.

The story is that of a dog, although the dog is not the only actor in the picture.

The story starts with the happy life of a little Indian girl and her father. A young naturalist who travels past their home stops and becomes acquainted, later falling in love with the girl. He goes away and the girl's father is killed by a villainous man who hunts the girl all through the story. The naturalist and the girl marry and after some time go to Alaska. On the ship as captain, in the man who kills the girl's father. His plan to kill the girl's husband and to capture the girl. He is finally successful in capturing the girl, although he succeeds in injuring the husband.

The girl in desperation drives a dog team two hundred miles through the snow for a doctor to attend her dying husband. This is pursued by the villain, who in the end gets what he deserves. She reaches her goal and finally she and her husband return to the girl and her father's home. The whole story is beautiful and in every way worth while seeing. It is a picture that every one can enjoy. Only a very small part of it is in a studio; the rest is all taken out doors in very unusual conditions. The story is of excitement and the plot is well worked out and well acted by a well selected cast.

Police Hunt Burglar
With Magazine Scheme

The police are looking for a burglar who has a somewhat unusual method of working. The man is said to have paid at a kiosk of old magazines. If no one answers the bell when he approaches a house, he knocks the door and waits. If the ring is answered he manages to escape a possible purchase by clever talking.

Five burglaries, in which small amounts were lost, were reported to the police Wednesday evening. They were at 1112 N. Main street, corner 16th; Morgan building, 4866 Montana street; 1529 Montana street, and one in the El Paso building.

HOLIDAY HALTS
TRIAL OF NEWSon of Senator Spends
Christmas Day In Jail
Despite Prediction.

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 25.—In spite of knowing his fate today as both prosecution and defense declared they hoped would be the case when his trial was begun on a charge of having murdered his sweetheart, Miss Freda Lesser, Harry New passed Christmas in the county jail. The court where his trial is in progress was adjourned at noon yesterday until tomorrow morning.

When depositions of all persons unable to give their testimony verbally have been read to the jury, Miss Clancy and Mrs. Burger will be called in the witness stand, according to defense counsel.

Renewed attempts to break down the testimony of Mrs. E. L. Lesser, witness for the prosecution, and introduction of further testimony in an effort to prove New insane, marked the presentation of the defense here yesterday.

Mrs. Lesser, a trained nurse, testified that New, about two weeks before the alleged murder July 5, asked her if she would allow Lesser in avoiding motherhood.

C. W. Butler and his son, Clara, testified today that on the evening of June 21, the date fixed by Mrs. Lesser for the alleged murder, they were in the room where New was held. New and remained until late in the evening, the father and son testified.

Several depositions from residents of Indianapolis were read to the jury. These tended to show New is insane, his attorneys asserted.

Superior Judge Gavin W. Craig, adjourned court at noon till Friday morning, saying he thought attorneys and jurors were entitled to "at least one afternoon for Christmas shopping."

The judge said he thought the jury and attorneys and "every one connected with the case" merry Christmas.
